City of Bonita Springs Stormwater Utility Study

The City of Bonita Springs is conducting a storm water utility feasibility study to evaluate establishing a storm water utility to provide a dedicated funding source for the management of the storm water system.

In November, 2012 the City adopted the Imperial River Basin Management Action Plan in conjunction with the state of Florida to improve water quality in the Imperial River.

Over the last two years, the city experienced significant flooding in the summer of 2017 with the onset of the Invest 92L storm system and then hurricane Irma. These events emphasized the need to study the existing stormwater infrastructure and identify any challenges that may be present.

FORM-BASED CODE WORKSHOPS

On September 25, 2018, the City conducted its first public workshop to introduce the concept of a Form-Based Code to residents. The workshop was well attended and the potential benefits of implementing Form-Based Code for future downtown development was introduced. As with other public workshops in the City of Bonita Springs, this one was designed so knowledgeable people from the development field, in this case DPZ Development, could share information with and solicit opinions from residents. Group workshops as well as individual appointments are being offered.

Form-based code is a planning and zoning tool that can regulate development by controlling building Form first (Form-Based Code) with usage being a second consideration. In past building and development, emphasis was usually on usage qualifiers first : residential neighborhoods separated from retail which is separated from industrial; thereby creating urban sprawl often reliant on vehicles to get from one area to another. Form-Based Code focuses on more compact, mixed-use development geared more toward pedestrians, rather than vehicle dependent sprawl. In the case of Bonita Springs, there would also be emphasis on keeping the Old Florida scale of design and the small town aesthetic which would ensure predictably of design and thoughtful economic development.

The second workshop was held on February 5, 2019. This workshop was offered to begin to shape the Form-Based Code. Existing city layouts and zonings were reviewed and information for new considerations was shared. Residents were given the opportunity to ask questions and express concerns. Questions included inquiries about parking allocations, grandfathered use of existing businesses, future expandability of the code and what that might look like. There were reservations about architectural limitations and affordability of housing. The DPZ representative explained that the wider range of building types associated with Form-Based Code is a natural progression toward affordable housing and although they would provide the mold for the buildings, the city would decide what would go inside. Recognizing the intent to appeal to younger generations by offering affordable housing and a safe area to raise families, as an investment in our community, can influence the style and mix of housing offered.

DPZ Development next presented their findings to City Council at the February 6th meeting. They communicated what information they had shared the previous night at the workshop along with the concerns of residents that attended the workshop. Council agreed to partner with DPZ for the next step, to look at the process of outlining the code and to accelerate the process. There is a consensus that Form-Based Code will be a positive step in the direction of Our Small Town Charm and Big Bright Future!

Mayor Simmons and Bonita Springs representatives recently visited our sister city Isla Mujeres in the state of Quintana Roo, Mexico. This trip was a follow-up to the Isla Mujeres representative's trip to Bonita Springs last year at this time. Juan Carrillo Soberanis, el Presidente municipal of Isla Mujeres, observed that our cities share a lot of similarities. Both are cities of development with a main industry of tourism and both are working toward the preservation of nature. The relationship continues as the Isla Mujeres semi-professional team has been invited to Bonita Springs for the April 12th —14th International Soccer Tournament sponsored by the Bonita Springs Soccer League.
